

The Easiest False Moves After the 20260312 State

Claude and MJC

March 12, 2026

1. Pretending the MCP has already been replaced.
2. Pretending the ablation question is already settled beyond rerun.
3. Pretending Track U and Track C are simply the same project with different aesthetics.
4. Pretending that adding more MCP tail content is safer than making one hard review decision.
5. Pretending that another benchmark row automatically clarifies the theory boundary.
6. Pretending that another theory note automatically clarifies the benchmark reality.
7. Pretending that the current split is final rather than possibly transitional.
8. Pretending that good prose can substitute for one verified result.
